Time to jump-start your career plan!

It can be hard to fit in time for career planning alongside your research but it is definitely worthwhile. The options open to you are vast but after years in academia, it can be a real challenge to navigate the job market. The entry routes into jobs are not transparent, you might not know what to expect in the application process or about how to build and tap into a network. Now is your opportunity to take time to reflect on what it is you can do and how and where you'd really like to work, bearing in mind your priorities may have shifted. We will also take a look at the landscape of the job market, talk about strategies for finding opportunities and help you plan some of your next career steps.

Dr. Philippa Cook (Careers Advisor with a focus on international PhD-Candidates and PhD-Holders)

12.30 PM–1.00 PM | Room 201 (big Meeting Point)

Lunch Break

12.30 PM–1.30 PM Lunch talk | Room 101

Consulting and Mentoring One-to-One

Needs, wishes, questions about equality and mentoring?
You are very welcome!

Dr.in Sarah Huch (Consultant and Coordinator for Gender & Diversity)

1.00 PM–2.30 PM | Room 201

Career Paths for natural scientists in academia – first hand experiences

How much planning does a career in science require? Which aspects are most relevant: topic, publications, third-party funding, networking, choice of mentors, personal life goals? What funding opportunities are relevant for which career stage? Prof.in PhD Constance Scharff will share her thoughts and experiences from her career path from student, postdoc to faculty in Germany and the US. She will provide some data on which careers people have pursued after getting a PhD in her or her husband's labs, showcasing that there is no 'typical' path. Bring your questions, worries, hopes to share and discuss, in English or German or both.

Constance Scharff, Prof.in PhD (Animal Behavior, FU Berlin, Deputy equal opportunity officer BCP FU Berlin, Member Einstein Center of Neuroscience, Member Max Planck School of Cognition, Member Scientific Advisory Board Leibniz Association)

2.30 PM- 4.30 PM | Room 119

How to find more confidence and ease in your body even in times of stress and uncertainty

This workshop will show you how your body is designed for balance and efficiency, so you can move with more comfort and ease even when under pressure. Learn to trust your body and yourself as you take ownership of who you are, and of the great work you are putting out into the world. You will leave with new embodiment tools you can use for the rest of your life.

Flora D.H. Ojanen (American certified Alexander Technique Educator, Posture Coach, Tai Chi and Yoga Instructor)
